

You love a boy (TP-9948)

You love a boy

Who loves you too.

You don't know who you are

And he doesn't like that in you

You're so insecure

You see him go away

When all he really wanted

Was to stay

And you have some friends

But none of them compare

To the dolls you played with

With the pretty blonde hair

So you dyed your hair

Like you dyed your clothes

And everything was pink

Except for your hope

And you lost that spark

The one that he loved

All because you decided

You had had enough

And the girls in the magazines

Had taken over

And the girls on instagram
With their pretty followers

Social media was now
Your new best friend
And all those parties
It seemed;
Would never end

And you saw a new you
That you actually quite liked
Shiny teeth
That didn't shine quite right

And everyone loved you
The brand new you
Except for the boy
Who knew it wasn't true

He knew about the scars
And the fake pink bag
He knew about the Barbie dolls
You always used to have

But Barbie was no longer a doll
And he was no longer Ken
And the one you used to hold

Was no longer your best friend

And so the girl that you once were

Started to shine through

The hurt was bringing her back

And you didn't know what to do

All your new friends

Started to erase

All the promises they made

Were no longer in place

The eyelashes were falling off

And so were the fake teeth

No one wanted you

They saw your stubby feet

He was gone

And so were you

Lost in confusion

On what you could do

So you gave yourself up

Into thin air

It seemed like the only way

Was to let the light through

But all the while

You didn't realise

That dear old Ken,
Was still in love with you.
